

The road of excess leads to the palace of wisdom.

AESTHETE 1925

WALTER S. HANKEL, Editor

Vol. 1. No. 1.

February

THE HARD PROFESSIONAL JOY OF THE AMERICAN PUBLIC	1
(Rhapsodic criticism with 39 metaphors and no ideas, by Paulina Roseyfield.)
GEE, AIN'T SHE A BEAUT!.....	12
(Keats' Ode to a Grecian Urn done into American and published as an original poem by John V. A. Bevo)
WHY I BELIEVE IN GLANDS.....	13
(A psychophysical treatise for the young by the author of Were You Ever a Child?)
H. L. NATHAN: A TRIBUTE.....	21
(By George Jean Mencken)
GEORGE JEAN MENCKEN: A TRIBUTE.....	22
(By H. L. Nathan)
AARON'S ROD AND THE BURNING BUSH.....	23
(A monologue for two voices by D. H. Lorenz)
THE MATHEMATICS OF SEX.....	31
(Dissertation on the numbers 68 and 70, pointing the way towards a reversal of standards, by Hysteron Proteron)
HOW TO MAKE A LIVING FOR TWO ON FRENCH VERBS....	43
("Helpful Wives" series, by Oynest Bird)

NEXT MONTH AND LATER

Tittle, by Tewson; Tattle, by Rascoe; Tittle-Tattle, by Farrar; Tut Tut, by Stuart P. Sherman.

No contributions are solicited. Address all business communications to Walter S. Hankel, 42 Grove Street, New York City.

Contributors are personally responsible for the articles which they sign.

The cover for this issue was designed by Charles Sheeler.

GUARANTEE

Every article contained in this issue of A. 1925 is guaranteed to be in strictly bad taste.